ment should be received by defendants from the Mexican authorities; and during M.'s life they duly paid him. M. died in June, 1894; but he had no legal personal representative till May, 1896, when the plt. became his administrator.

In an action for account brought by the plt. in June, 1896, the Court, on Nov. 4, 1897, declared that he was entitled to an account of what was due under the contract, and on Nov. 13 the defts. delivered an account shewing that 19,366 Mexican dollars were due to the plt. on Aug. 31, 1896, and offering to pay that amount in Mexican currency or in English currency at the rate of exchange on Nov. 13. On Aug. 31, 1896, the Mexican dollar was worth 2s. 6d., on Nov. 13, 1887, it was only worth 1s. 10½d.; and the plt. refused the defts.' offer, and contended that the value of the dollar should be ascertained at the several times the monthly payments became due, or, in the alternative, on Aug. 31, 1896:—

Held, by C. A. (V. Williams L.J. dissentiente), dismissing an appeal from Kekewich J., that the plt. was not entitled to have the dollars turned into English money until the amount due on taking the whole account was ascertained.

2. — Audit—Finality of—Contract—Agreement—Charges of fraud—Costs.

The appellant advanced 15,000*l.* to the respondent, to be used in the business of the respondent for five years. In return for the advance the appellant was to receive interest and 37½ per cent. of the profits of the respondent's business. The contract stipulated that there should be an annual audit of the respondent's business by the firm of M. & Co., accountants, and that their certificate as to the profits should be binding on both parties. For four years the respondent's books were audited by G., a member of the firm of M. & Co. Subsequently the appellant raised this action against the respondent for a judicial account on the ground that the audits had not been in terms of the agreement in respect that the auditor did not know that his estimate of the profits was to be binding on the appellant and respondent. G. swore in his evidence that he did not know of this agreement, and that if he had he would have made out the account in a somewhat different form:—

Held, reversing Ct. of Sess., (1898) 25 R. 661, that there must be a new account taken, the auditor being unaware that his audit was to be final between the parties. TEACHER v. CALDER

6. — Trust deed—Misconduct of trustee—Common accounts refused at the trial—Discretion of Court—Administration action—R. S. C., 1883, Order LV., r. 10.

In 1887 A. conveyed his business and property to B. upon trusts for the benefit of his creditors with an ultimate trust for himself. Under the powers in the deed, B. carried on the business by means of an overdraft arranged with a bank. In 1893 A. assigned his interest under the deed to his wife, the plt., for her separate use. In 1896 B. reconveyed the trust estate to the plt., the reconveyance containing a recital that all A.'s debts had been paid. On this occasion some investigation of the trust account was made by the plt., but a detailed account was not required. In July, 1898, B. destroyed all the books of account in the belief that they were no longer of use. In Oct. 1898, the plt. brought an action against B. charging him with fraud and misconduct, and claiming an account of all his transactions under the trust deed from 1887 to 1896 on the footing of wilful default. B. denied the charges, but admitted (1) that he had improperly allowed the trust estate to be charged for a short period with interest at 5 per cent. on sums amounting to 10,000l.; (2) that he had received the usual commissions, amounting to 31l. 10s. 8d., on fire insurances of the trust estate; and (3) that he had retained 52l. 17s. 6d. for debts of A. due in 1887, but never claimed. At the trial the charges of fraud and wilful default were not established, but the plt. claimed an order for a common account from 1887:—

Held, that, although B. had been guilty of some misconduct, it was not a case in which the Court, in the exercise of its discretion under Order LV., r. 10, would under the circumstances make an order for a common account; but there would be judgment for the plt. for the amounts admitted under the three items above mentioned.

ACCUMULATIONS—By the Accumulations Act, 1892 (55 & 56 Vict. c. 58), accumulations for the purchase of land were restrained.

1. — Annuities — Charity — Thellusson Act (39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 98).

Where there is an absolute vested gift made payable in a future event, with direction to accumulate the income and pay it with the principal, the Court will not enforce the trust for accumulation, in which no person has any interest but the legatee; in other words, a legatee may put an end to an accumulation exclusively for his benefit. This principle is applicable whether the legatee is a charity corporate or unincorporate or an individual.

Where such an accumulation is directed for more than twenty-one years from the death of the testor, and for the above reason is not effective, the Thellusson Act does not apply. HARBIN v. MASTERMAN (No. 1).

A direction in a will that, after providing for the annuity, the surplus income should be expended in maintaining and improving the settled property, is held to be valid as being a discretionary trust for the whole life of the annuitant, and not an accumulation within the danger of the Thellusson Act, to be restricted to twenty-one years.

Per C. A., all improvements in substance which could in any fair sense be regarded as coming under the words maintaining in good habitable repair houses and tenements on the property are wholly outside the Thellusson Act. But money laid out in building new houses would be within the act, and the surplus income cannot be expended on charges properly payable out of capital. VINE v. RALEIGH (No. 1)

Where a testator gave to an infant an immediate vested life interest in his residuary estate:—

Held, that the income which accumulated, after maintenance, between the testator's death and the infant's marriage, belonged to her absolutely and was not an accretion to capital, the immediate gift shewing an intention (sub-s. 3) to exclude the provisions of sub-s. 2, s. 43, of the Conveyancing Act, 1881. *In re HUMPHREYS. 4. — “Intermediate income” — “Set apart and retain” — Application of part of income — Will — Trust for conversion — Postponement of conversion at discretion of trustees — Thellusson Act (39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 98), s. 2.

The words “retain and set apart” are equivalent to a direction to accumulate although there is no express direction to accumulate, and, there being no direction in the will for payment of debts:—

Held, that the trust fell within s. 2 of the Thellusson Act, and was therefore void beyond the statutory period of twenty-one years. In re COX. COX v. EDWARDS — Byrne J. [1900] W. N. 89

5. — Intestacy — Surplus income — Will — Trust to accumulate income beyond twenty-one years — Thellusson Act (39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 98).

A testator devised and bequeathed his estate and effects to trustees upon trust to pay out of the income thereof an annuity of 200*l.* to his niece during her life, and he directed that the surplus income of his trust estate should accumulate and be invested until the death of his niece, and, subject and without prejudice to the trusts aforesaid, his trust estate should be held in trust for the children of his niece living at his decease, or born afterwards, who should attain twenty-one, or who dying under that age should leave issue living at his or her decease, if more than one in equal shares; and in case there should be no such issue of the niece then, subject and without prejudice to the trusts aforesaid,

after her death and the failure of her issue, as to one-third of his trust estate the same should be held in trust for some cousins named in the will, and as to the other two-thirds the same should be held in trust for the trustees of a charity:—

Held, that as to the surplus income from the expiration of twenty-one years after the testator's death down to the death of the niece there was an intestacy.

Weatherall v. Thornburgh, (1878) 8 Ch. D. 261, is not inconsistent with and has not been overruled by Wharton v. Masterman, [1895] A. C. 186.

Held also, on the construction of the will, that the persons who should become on the death of the niece entitled to the trust fund would become entitled also to the accumulations of the surplus income during the period of twenty-one years from the death of the testator. In re TRAVIS. FROST v. GREATOROX

6. — Mining leases, Rents and royalties from—Tenants for life—Remaindermen—Direction to accumulate—Construction of will.

A testator devised his residue upon trust to convert with power to postpone conversion for twenty-one years, and with a direction that the surplus income of the unconverted estate during the twenty-one years and all accumulations thereof should go in augmentation of capital. The residue was settled on trusts for tenants for life and remaindermen. The trustees under powers in the will granted a mining lease, and retained the leased property unconverted for more than twenty-one years:—

Held, that the rents and royalties received under the mining lease during the twenty-one years ought to be invested, and that the income therefrom ought to be invested and accumulated:

Held also, that after the twenty-one years, the tenants for life of settled shares in the residue were entitled to receive out of the rents and royalties such an annual sum as in the opinion of the Court would under all the circumstances of the case be a fair equivalent for the annual income that would have resulted if the estate had been converted.

The rule laid down in Meyer v. Simonsen, (1852) 5 De G. & Sm. 723, and Brown v. Gellatly, (1867) L. R. 2 Ch. 751, approved. WENTWORTH v. WENTWORTH -

7. — Rebuilding and repair of buildings—Accumulation of income—Thellusson Act (39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 98).

A testator directed the net rents and income of his real and leasehold estates to be applied during the lifetime of certain annuitants under his will in paying the ground-rents, the annuities, and the cost of repairs and insurance, and the clear surplus in augmentation of the general trust fund created by his will:—

Held, (1) that the will amounted to an express direction for the accumulation of income; and (2) that the trust for accumulation was valid, so far as it was a bonâ fide provision for the performance of the trusts for rebuilding, repairing, and reinstating the buildings; but that, subject to the due performance of such trusts, the trust for investment of the surplus income, after answering the purposes specified in the will, was invalid as from the expiration of twenty-one years from the testator's death. In re MASON. MASON v. MASON - Stirling J. [1891] 3 Ch. 467

8. — Rents of leaseholds—Direction to accumulate for 21 years after testator's death—Accumulations Act, 1892 (55 & 56 Vict. c. 58).

D. by his will devised lands on trust in strict settlement, and directed that accumulations made during the minority of any infant taking should be deemed capital money arising under the Settled Land Acts, and should be primarily liable to be laid out in the purchase of land, and bequeathed leaseholds to trustees on trusts corresponding to the trusts of the land; with a proviso that during twenty-one years after his death the net profits should be capitalised and become capital money of the settlement:—

Held, that the direction to capitalise the rents of the leaseholds did not fall within the Accumulation Act, 1892, and was valid. In re DANSON. BELL v. DANSON Chitty J. [1895] W. N. 102

9. — Substitution—Annuity—Construction of will—Appeal from Quebec.

A testator set apart a fund as a provision for his wife and also for his children until majority or marriage. He gave the residue of his estate to his children living at his death, and directed that it should be divided on the death of all of them. He further directed that from majority or marriage each child was to receive the revenue derivable from his share limited to $6000 a year, each child being charged with a substitution in favour of his or her children:—

Held, in a suit brought by the eldest son to recover arrears of his annuity of $6000 a year, that according to the true intention of the testator as disclosed by the words of the will—

(1) the annuity of each child is a charge on the revenue of his own share and its arrears, not on the total revenue of the estate;

(2) each child was entitled from the testator's death to an equal share of the net revenue current and accumulated; without regard to the benefits which during minority he receives from the fund set apart or under other clauses of the will;

(3) the substitution is confined to the share of each child in the capital of the residue, and does not extend to the accumulation of its revenue. BEAUDRY v. BARBEAU

P. C. [1900] A. C. 569

10. — Trust for accumulation of income for payment of debts—Cesser of life estate—Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 2, sub-s. 2, 5, 7; s. 58, sub-s. 1, cl. vi.

A testor. devised land in trust for a daughter for life with a gift over to her children; and proviso that if a sum of money covenanted to be paid by the testor. in the daughter's marriage settlement were enforced against his estate, the daughter's interest in the life estate should cease until all the debts and claims were paid. The covenant was enforced, and the personality being insufficient to pay this and other claims against the estate, the income of the life estate was retained:—

Held, that the daughter's life estate under the will was only suspended, and that she was entitled to exercise during the continuance of the trust, which was substantially a trust for accumulation of income for payment of debts within s. 58, sub-s. 1, cl. vi. of the Act of 1882. WILLIAMS v. 11. — Validity—Direction to accumulate income beyond twenty-one years—Residue—Tenant for life—Construction of will.

The testator, who died in 1865, by his will gave two freehold houses to trustees, and directed them to apply the income arising therefrom at their discretion for the benefit of his daughter F. for life, and after her death he gave the premises, together with any surplus accumulation of rents that might not be applied, for the benefit of F. upon trust for her children who should attain twenty-one, and in default of such children then over. He gave his residue upon trust for certain persons for life with remainders over. F. died in 1900, at which time the trustees had in their hands a considerable sum representing the accumulated surplus rents:—

Held, that the accumulations beyond the period of twenty-one years from the testator's death were bad under the Thellusson Act, and fell into residue; and that the tenant for life of the residue was not entitled to the surplus rents themselves, but only to the income arising from the investment thereof.

1. — Cause of Maliciously inducing employer to discharge servant and not to employ servant—Interference with trade—Trade union—Malice—Intent to injure—Motive.

An act lawful in itself is not converted by a malicious or bad motive into an unlawful act so as to make the doer of the act liable to a civil action.

Discussion of the cases in which evil motive is said to be an essential ingredient in a civil cause of action, such as malicious prosecution: see per Lord Watson, Lord Herschell, and Lord Davey, [1898] A. C. at pp. 92, 93, 125, 126, 173.

The respondents were shipwrights employed "for the job" on the repairs to the woodwork of a ship, but were liable to be discharged at any time. Some ironworkers who were employed on the ironwork of the ship objected to the respondents being employed, on the ground that the respondents had previously worked at ironwork on a ship for another firm, the practice of shipwrights working on iron being resisted by the trade union of which the ironworkers were members. The appellant, who was a delegate of the union, was sent for by the ironworkers and informed that they intended to leave off working. The appellant informed the employers that unless the respondents were discharged all the ironworkers would be called out or knock off work (it was doubtful which expression was used); that the employers had no option; that the ironmen were doing their best to put an end to the practice of shipwrights doing ironwork, and that wherever the respondents were employed the ironmen would cease work. There was evidence that this was done to punish the respondents for what they had done in the past. The employers, in fear of this threat being carried out which (as they knew) would have stopped their business, discharged the respondents and refused to employ them again. In the ordinary course the respondents' employment would have continued. The respondents having brought an action against the appellant, the jury found that he had maliciously induced the employers to discharge the respondents and not to engage them, and gave the respondents a verdict for damages:—

Held, reversing the decision of the C. A., Flood v. Jackson, [1895] 2 Q. B. 21 (Lord Halsbury L.C. and Lords Ashbourne and Morris dissenting), that the appellant had violated no legal right of the respondents, done no unlawful act, and used no unlawful means, in procuring the respondents' dismissal; that his conduct was therefore not actionable however malicious or bad his motive might be, and that notwithstanding the verdict the appellant was entitled to judgment.

1. — Article of food—Baking powder—Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 63), s. 3.

A. sold a baking-powder composed of 20 per cent. of bicarbonate of soda, 40 per cent. of ground rice, and 40 per cent. of alum, which is injurious to health:—

Held, that such baking-powder was not an article of food, and that the sale of it so compounded was not an offence within s. 3. JAMES v. JONES — Div. Ct. [1894] 1 Q. B. 304

A sale to the prejudice of the purchaser of a compounded drug, which is not of the nature, substance, and quality of the article demanded, is an offence under s. 6 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, and proceedings for the recovery of a penalty may be taken under that section. BEARDSLEY v. WALTON & Co.

3. — Magistrate—Jurisdiction—Place where offence committed—Analysis—Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 63), ss. 6, 20, 27.

An information was preferred in the Clerkenwell Police Court by an inspector of nuisances for the district, charging the deft. with having, contrary to s. 27 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, given a false warranty in writing with respect to milk sold and delivered by him to a dairy co. The sale, delivery, and giving of the warranty had all taken place outside the limits of the jurisdiction of the Clerkenwell Police Court; but the inspector had, with a view to a prosecution against the dairy co. under s. 6, obtained a sample of the milk in the course of its delivery by them, within the jurisdiction of that Court, to purchasers from them, and had submitted the sample to the public analyst of the district, who certified that it contained a percentage of added water:—

Held, that a metropolitan police magistrate sitting at the Clerkenwell Police Court had no jurisdiction under the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, to hear and determine the information against the defendant. REG. v. SMITH

I estimate the excess of water at 13% of the entire sample. I am of opinion that the sample is not a sample of genuine rum” :—

Held, that the certificate ought to have stated the proportion of water mixed with the rum, was insufficient, and that a conviction could not be supported. NEWBY v. SIMS

7. — Certificate, sufficiency of—Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 63), s. 18.

In a prosecution under the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, for selling adulterated milk, the certificate of the public analyst stated that the sample submitted to him contained 6 per cent. of added water, and went on to say, “This opinion is based on the fact that the sample contained 7·97 per cent. solids not fat, whereas genuine milk contains not less than 8·5 per cent. solids not fat” :—

Held, that the certificate was good, although it did not state the constituent parts of the sample analyzed.

8. — Certificate — Unauthorized addition—Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 63), ss. 6, 18.

The certificate of a public analyst of the result of an analysis under the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, where the case is not one of adulteration, need not set out the parts contained in the sample; it need only state the “result” of the analysis. The “observations” which follow the “result” in the form of certificate given in the schedule to the Act are only to be made in case of adulteration. But if in a case not of adulteration such “observations,” amounting only to an expression of opinion and not to a statement of fact, are made, this, though improper, will not necessarily vitiate a conviction. BAREWELL v. DAVIS — Div. Ct. [1894] 1 Q. B. 296

9. — Certificate of analyst—Evidence—Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 63), s. 21.

At the hearing of an information under the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, the production of the certificate of the analyst is not conclusive evidence if the defendant tenders himself as a witness and gives evidence on his own behalf. HEWITT v. TAYLOR — [1896] 1 Q. B. 287

10. — Certificate of analysts, Sufficiency of—Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 63), ss. 6, 18, 21.

In a prosecution under the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, for selling adulterated milk to a purchaser, the only evidence of adulteration was the certificate of the public analyst, which stated that the sample submitted to him “contained the percentage of foreign ingredients as under: 5 per cent. of added water” :—

Held, that the certificate was bad as evidence, under the Act, of adulteration, because it did not state the constituent parts of the sample analyzed. FORTUNE v. HANSON

11. — Sample—Purchase for analysis—Mode of dividing sample—Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 63), s. 14.

Where a purchase is made of several articles of food or drugs at the same time for the purpose of analysis, each article purchased must be divided into three parts, and otherwise dealt with as required by s. 14 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875. Where a purchase is made of six bottles of the same article of food or drug, each bottle is for the purposes of the Act a separate article, and it is therefore not a sufficient compliance with the requirements of s. 14 for the purchaser to divide them into three lots of two bottles each without opening any of the bottles, and to hand one lot to the analyst, one to the seller, and to retain one himself. MASON v. COWDARY

Div. Ct. [1900] 2 Q. B. 419

12. — Sample—Purchase for analysis—Notification to seller—Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 63), ss. 13, 14—Margarine Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 29), ss. 6, 12.

The requirements of s. 14 of the Food and Drugs Act, 1879, are peremptory and cannot be dispensed with. Therefore, even if the seller admit the offence at the time, notice to him that it is intended to have an analysis made and the making of an analysis are conditions precedent to a prosecution. *SMART & SON v. 15. — "Exposed for sale" — Margarine Act, 1882 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 29), s. 6.

The respondents were summoned for exposing margarine for sale by retail, without a label marked "Margarine" attached to each parcel, contrary to s. 6. The respondents kept a refreshment-room, in which were posted notices that "Nothing but a mixture of the best Danish butter and margarine is sold at this establishment." Slices of bread, spread with a mixture of Danish butter and margarine, were sold for consumption on the premises, and also haddocks, on which was put margarine cut from a lump kept on a shelf. There were no labels either on the slices or on the lump of margarine:—

Held, that the margarine had not been exposed for sale by retail, within the meaning of the Margarine Act, 1887, s. 6, and therefore no offence had been committed. MOORE v. PEARCE'S DINING AND REFRESHMENT ROOMS, LD.

The appellant was convicted, on the complaint of the guardians of a union, by county justices, under the Margarine Act, 1887, for selling margarine otherwise than in a package marked "Margarine," contrary to s. 6. The margarine was delivered to the purchaser in a borough which had not a separate court of quarter sessions:—

Held, affirming the conviction.—That the county justices had jurisdiction:—That, the justices having found that the article sold was not a perishable article, s. 10 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act Amendment Act, 1879, did not apply, and it was not necessary that the summons should be served within twenty-eight days from the time of the purchase:—That, the margarine not having been purchased for test purposes, or with the intention of submitting it to analysis, it was not a condition precedent to the prosecution under the Margarine Act that the notification of intention to have it analyzed, prescribed by s. 14 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, should have been given to the appellant.

18. — Altered state, sale of article of food in—Disclosure of alteration—Mens rea—Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 63), s. 9.

By s. 9 of the Food and Drugs Act, 1875, "No person shall, with the intent that the same may be sold in its altered state without notice, abstract from an article of food any part of it so as to affect injuriously its quality, substance or nature, and no person shall sell any article so altered without making disclosure of the alteration, under a penalty in each case not exceeding twenty pounds."

The appellants, a firm of refreshment contractors, entered into a contract with a dairy

co. for the supply to them of milk; the contract containing a warranty by the co. as to the purity of the milk to be supplied. Milk was delivered under the contract at a refreshment room of the appellants; it was handed in a can to one of their servants, who poured a portion of it into a churn, which was placed on the counter for the purpose of the milk being sold to customers; it was so poured that a less proportion of cream was in the milk that went into the churn than in the milk which remained in the can. The respondent bought a glass of milk at the counter; the milk was drawn from the churn, and on analysis shewed a deficiency of 17 per cent. of cream. Upon the glass in which the milk was served were engraved the words, "Not guaranteed as new or pure milk or with all its cream, see notices"; and upon the refreshment counter was a printed notice to the effect that all milk sold by the appellants was purchased by them under a warranty of its purity and genuine quality; that they took all possible precautions to ensure its supply to their customers in proper condition, but were unable to guarantee it as new, pure, or with all its cream, and did not, therefore, sell it as such:—

Held, that, assuming that the facts showed an abstraction from the milk, there had been a sufficient disclosure by the appellants of the alteration to satisfy the requirements of the section.

In order to constitute the offence of selling an article in its altered state without disclosure of the alteration, it is unnecessary to shew a mens rea on the part of the seller. SPIERS & POND v. BENNETT - - [1896] 2 Q. B. 65

19. — Guilty intent—Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 63), s. 9.

The prohibition in s. 9 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, forbidding the sale of any article so altered as to injuriously affect its quality without disclosing the alteration, applies irrespective of the intent with which the alteration is made:—

Held, that a person selling milk by retail in such a manner that the later customers got milk very deficient in quality was guilty of an offence under the section. DYKE v. GOWER

The respondent, a milk salesman, contracted, to supply pure milk to an association. The milk was to be delivered to the association at a railway terminus in London. The respondent delivered the milk in a pure and unadulterated condition to the servants of the ry. co. at his local station, and the milk was adulterated without his knowledge or consent during the transit from the local station to the terminus:—

A. contracted to supply a workhouse with milk to contain a certain percentage of cream; to be tested on delivery and a reduction to be made in the price in respect of any deficiency in cream; and samples to be taken from each of the cans in which the daily supply was delivered. Samples were taken from five cans under s. 3 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Amendment Act, 1879, and a large deficiency of cream found in two samples:—

Held, that the procuring of each sample was a separate transaction, and that A. was rightly convicted in a separate penalty in respect of each sample which was deficient in cream:

Held, further, that the fact that A.'s contract with the workhouse provided for a reduction in price if the percentage of cream was below a certain amount did not affect the question whether an offence had been committed under the Sale of Food and Drugs Act. FEIGHT v. WALSH

25. — Sale to prejudice of purchaser—Defence that article bought with written warranty—Subsequent proceedings against wholesale merchant—Certificate of analyst—Evidence—Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 63), ss. 6, 14, 21, 25—Margarine Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 29), ss. 6, 7, 12.

Where, upon the hearing of a summons under s. 6 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, the deft. establishes the defence under s. 25 of the Act that he bought the article with a written warranty and sold it in the same state as when he purchased it, the certificate of the public analyst used in those proceedings is not evidence in subsequent proceedings before justices against the person from whom the deft. purchased the article.

Upon the hearing of a summons under the above section for selling as butter an article which was not of the nature, substance, and quality of the article demanded, the certificate of the public analyst shewed the article sold to be margarine; the summons was, however, dismissed on the deft. proving a purchase with a written warranty from the respondents. A summons was then taken out against the respondents under s. 6 of the Margarine Act, 1887, for delivering the margarine in a package not marked as required by the section, and at the hearing before justices the same certificate was tendered as evidence against the respondents, but was rejected:—

Held, that the certificate was not evidence against the respondents that the article sold and delivered by them was margarine, and that the evidence was properly rejected. TYLER v. KINGHAM & SON, LD. Div. Ct. [1900] 2 Q. B. 413

26. — Written warranty—Contract to supply milk in instalments—"Milk to be pure new milk"—Whether a warranty within the Act—Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 63), s. 25.

By s. 25 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, "If the deft. in any prosecution under this Act prove to the satisfaction of the justices . . . that he had purchased the article in question as the same in nature, substance, and quality as that demanded of him by the prosecutor and with a written warranty to that effect," he shall, under certain other specified conditions, be entitled to be discharged from the prosecution.

Upon the hearing of an information against the respondent for having, contrary to the provisions of the Act, sold on Dec. 15, 1899, certain milk to the appellant which was not of the nature, substance, and quality demanded of him by the appellant, the respondent relied on an agreement in writing dated Jan. 20, 1899, by which a farmer agreed to sell to the respondent 1000 gallons of milk weekly, "the milk to be pure new milk":—

Held, that, even if the agreement amounted to a warranty within the meaning of s. 25, there must be some evidence in writing to shew that the particular milk sold to the appellant was purchased with that warranty, and that in the absence of that evidence the agreement afforded no defence to the respondent. *ROBERTSON v. Part of the was sold to the appellant, and was on anal found to be adulterated. An information laid against W. under the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875:—

Held, that the contract contained a sufficient warranty of the purity of the lard to satisfy s. 6 of the Act of 1875, and that W. was entitled to be discharged from the prosecution. LAID v. WILSON Div. Ct. [1894] 1 Q. B.

By reason of the conversion into 2½ per cent. Consols, the income became insufficient:—

Held, that the annuities were charged on the capital of the fund, and the provisions of s. 20(3) of the National Debt Conversion Act did not override the provisions of the will, and that the annuitants were entitled to be paid in full. PACK v. DARBY North J. [1895] W. N. 123 (6)

Where an annuity is payable out of the clear residuary estate of a testator, the Court has jurisdiction to set apart a sufficient sum to answer the annuity, and to pay the remainder of the residue to the residuary legatees. And this jurisdiction will be exercised in a proper case notwithstanding the opposition of the annuitant:—

Per Lindley L.J.: The annuitant has nevertheless the right to resort, if it becomes necessary, to the corpus of the fund set apart. In an administration action, where several respondents to an unsuccessful appeal were in the same interest, the Court allowed only one set of costs against the appellant, and directed those costs to be paid to the respondents who had the conduct of the proceedings in the cause.

The solicitor of an appellant will be ordered to indemnify his client against the costs of the appeal, if it was prosecuted, not in the interests of the client, but for the purposes of the solicitor. HARBIN v. MASTERMAN (No. 2)

1. — Chambers—Appeal from order made in—Refusal of judge to give certificate—Judicature Act, 1873 (36 & 37 Vict. c. 66), s. 50.

Originating summons by a client under the Solicitors Act. Kekewich J. in chambers dismissed the summons and declined to give a certificate that the matter had been sufficiently argued before him, and that he did not desire to hear further argument in court.

On motion ex parte for leave to come direct to the C. A. without moving before the learned judge in court to discharge his order made in chambers:—

Held, that the practice is now perfectly well settled that, unless the judge gives a certificate, the person who desires to appeal must first move in court to discharge the order made in chambers. The C. A. had considered this point fully already and would not now allow it to be reargued. Motion refused. In re PEARCE

A motion to discharge an order made in chambers is not an “appeal,” but a rehearing. The right to move to discharge an order made in chambers by a judge of the Ch. Div. was expressly reserved by s. 50 of the Judicature Act, 1873, and that right (exercisable without leave, if notice is given within fourteen days) has not been taken away by s. 1 of the Act of 1894.

An unsuccessful litigant in chambers in the Ch. Div. has still three alternatives, (i.), to move in Court to discharge the order; (ii.) to have the matter adjourned into Court; (iii.) to obtain leave from the judge to go straight to C. A. BOAKE v. STEVENSON

An application to a magistrate for a summons against a co., to recover penalties for default in forwarding a list of its members to the registrar of joint stock companies, as required by s. 26 of the Companies Act, 1862, is a criminal proceeding. Therefore, the judgment of the Q. B. The Q. B. Div. refused to grant an order nisi for a mandamus to compel a stipendiary magistrate who had made an order under s. 96 of the Public Health Act, 1875, for the abatement of a nuisance, to state a case for the opinion of the Court:—

Held, that the decision of the Q. B. Div. was given in a “criminal cause or matter” within s. 47 of the Judicature Act, 1873, and therefore that the C. A. had no jurisdiction to entertain the application for a mandamus. Ex parte SCHORFIELD

The first paragraph there given, namely, "It is desirable that solicitors should know that, on an appeal in cases where evidence has been taken orally in the Court below, it is their duty to apply in good time for the judge's notes of evidence," was correct; but the concluding words should read as follows: "If they do so, this Court will apply to the judge for a copy of his notes; but if, as frequently happens, a copy of the notes is applied for just before the appeal comes on for hearing, there is no time to obtain a copy for the use of the C. The right of appeal against the order of a judge sanctioning a scheme of arrangement in the matter of a co. is governed by the same conditions as appeals from decisions in the ordinary jurisdiction of the Court.

A judge made an order sanctioning a scheme of arrangement under the Joint Stock Companies Arrangement Act, 1870. Persons appealed who were interested as creditors, but who had not opposed the scheme at the meeting of creditors, nor appeared before the judge, nor obtained leave to appeal :—

Held, that, as the appellants were not parties to the proceedings, they could not according to the Chancery practice appeal without the leave of the Court. In re SECURITIES INSURANCE CO.

A contract for the employment of the plt. by the defts. for five years provided, among other things, that the defts. might dismiss the plt., if he were guilty of gross misconduct, and that, if any dispute should arise between the defts. and the plt. touching their or his rights or liabilities under the contract, it should be referred to arbitration. The defts. dismissed the plt. on the ground of alleged misconduct, and the plt. thereupon brought an action against the defendants claiming damages for wrongful dismissal:—

Held, that the dispute was within the terms of the arbitration clause in the contract, and that reference of the plt.'s claim to arbitration should be enforced under the Arbitration Act, 1889, s. 4.

A contract made before the commencement of the Arbitration Act, 1889, provided for reference of all differences to a standing referee, or failing him to a person to be named by a person specified in the contract. It was afterwards agreed that the arbitration should be conducted according to the Act of 1889. The arbitrator made an award and left the country. During his absence, further differences having arisen, one of the parties applied to the person specified in the contract to appoint another arbitrator, which was done. The person named objected to act without a judge's order, which was granted, not to take effect if the original arbitrator should return by a certain day. He did not return till later:—

Held, that the case was not one where an appointed arbitrator refused to act or was incapable of acting within s. 5 (b) of the Arbitration Act, 1889, and therefore that there was no jurisdiction to make an order appointing a fresh arbitrator. In re WILSON & SON AND THE EASTERN COUNTIES NAVIGATION AND TRANSPORT CO.

Held, that the notice being sufficient, the Court was bound on application to appoint an arbitrator. As a general rule, where the conditions exist under which s. 5 of the Arbitration Act, 1889, is applicable, the Court has no discretion to refuse to appoint an arbitrator, the word "may" in the section being equivalent to "must" In re EYRE AND LEICESTER CORPORATION

11. — Disqualification—Bias.

An arbitrator named in a reference is not disqualified merely because circumstances may exist or arise such as to cause a suspicion of bias.

A contract provided that all disputes arising thereout should be decided by a certain barrister. Disputes arose in which one party alleged misconduct, affecting fulfilment of the contract, on the part of the representative of a firm of solicitors. An action to stay arbitration before the barrister on the ground that he had intimate professional relations with the solicitors, held untenable. *BRIGHT v. RIVER PLATE CONSTRUCTION CO. The rule that a judge ought not to hear cases in which he might be suspected of bias in favour of one of the parties, does not apply to an arbitrator named by the parties in a contract under which all disputes are to be referred to him. To disqualify such an arbitrator at least a probability of bias must be shewn. Where such an arbitrator is a servant of one of the parties, he is not disqualified by the fact that he may have to decide whether he himself acted with due skill. *EOCKESLEY v. In an action upon an award the defts. pleaded that the lump sum awarded included matters, claims, and demands in respect of which the arbitrators had no jurisdiction, as not having been referable to them under the terms of the contract between the parties:—

Held, that, as it appeared that the matters actually referred were those contained in the submission, the award was not bad (1) on the face of it by reason that it did not state that matters not referred had been rejected from consideration; (2) because the arbitrators had taken evidence on matters not referred, but not shewn to have been irrelevant to the inquiry, or to have been included in the award of the lump sum.

The defts. having counter-claimed in respect of liquidated damages for delays not allowed in writing by their engineer-in-chief:—

Held, that the counter-claim must be disallowed, for the refusal to allow delays was itself by the terms of the contract subject to arbitration, and a final award was by the same terms competent without sending the matter back to the engineer. *FALKINGHAM v. Sect. 19 of the Arbitration Act, 1889, impliedly confers on a party to an arbitration the right, at any stage of the proceedings, to apply to the Court for an order directing the arbitrator to state in the form of a special case for the opinion of the Court any question of law arising in the course of the reference.

If a party to an arbitration, acting bonâ fide, requests the arbitrator on reasonable grounds either to state a special case for the opinion of the Court upon some questions so arising and material for consideration, or to delay his award until the party can himself apply to the Court for an order directing a special case, and the arbitrator refuses to comply with the request, or by summarily making his award attempts to preclude the party from applying, the arbitrator is prima facie guilty of a breach of duty towards that party. But if the application is frivolous and made merely for the purpose of delay, the arbitrator will be right in refusing it, and will be upheld by the Court if he does so.

A breach of duty of this character is prima facie misconduct on the part of an arbitrator within the meaning of s. 11 of the Act of 1889, and justifies the Court, even after an award has been completed, in setting it aside under s. 11, sub-s. 2, or in remitting it for reconsideration under s. 10, sub-s. 1.

This view of the law is consistent with Dinn v. Blake, (1875) L. R. 10 C. P. 383, and In re Keighley, Maxsted & Co. and Durant & Co., [1893] 1 Q. B. 405.

In this case, on the ground of misconduct of that character by the arbitrators, a completed award was remitted to them with a direction that they should reconsider it, and state whether there was a deficiency in the quantity of a cargo of wheat delivered at a port of discharge, and, if there was, then to state a special case. *In re PALMER & CO. By a policy of insurance against fire, differences between the parties were to be referred as they arose to arbitrators then to be named, and it was expressly declared such reference, and that obtaining on award, should be a condition precedent to the commencement of any action on the policy:—

Held, (1) that the condition to ascertain the damage by arbitration was an integral part of the contract of indemnity under the policy, and was a condition precedent to the bringing of any action on the policy; (2) that the contract could be enforced, notwithstanding the reference was to unnamed arbitrators, as the cause of action did not arise until after the arbitration. CALEDONIAN INSURANCE Co. v. The contract contained an arbitration clause as to all differences arising under it. Disputes arose and an arbitration was held:—

The mere filing of affidavits in answer to a motion for a receiver in an action for dissolution of partnership is not a "step in the proceedings" within s. 4 of the Arbitration Act, 1889, the taking of which will preclude the defendant from moving to refer the case to arbitration under a clause in the partnership articles. *ZALINOFF v. Where an agreement to refer disputes to arbitration provides for a reference to three arbitrators, one to be appointed by each of the parties, and the third by the two so appointed, and one of the parties refuses to appoint an arbitrator and brings an action against the other party to the submission, the Court has, under s. 4 of the Arbitration Act, 1889, power to stay the action. *MANCHESTER SHIP CANAL CO. v. "Submission" in s. 27 of the Arbitration Act, 1889, means a "written agreement" to submit differences to arbitration, but not necessarily an agreement signed by both parties. Hence, where a policy of insurance provided for a submission of differences to arbitration as a condition precedent to taking legal proceedings, an action on the policy was stayed, although the policy had not been signed by the person insured. *BAKER v. The plt. was a member of a volunteer corps, which was trained and exercised with a portion of the regular forces at Shorncliffe Camp under an order of the War Office, forming a volunteer brigade for the purpose of such training and exercise during the period Aug. 1 to Aug. 8, 1896. Upon the latter day, while preparations were going on for the departure of the volunteers from the camp, he was charged with larceny from a comrade. The adjutant of the corps gave orders that he should be taken under arrest with the baggage guard to Shorncliffe Station, and thence to Boxmoor Station in the special military train which was on that day to convey the corps home, and that on arrival at the latter station he should be taken to Hemel Hempstead, where he lived, and handed over to the police authority there. The plt. was accordingly taken under arrest to Shorncliffe Station, and three of his comrades were there told off to form his escort in the train and to take him from Boxmoor Station to Hemel Hempstead, and there hand him over to the police, which they did.

In an action against them for assault and false imprisonment:—

Held (reversing the judgment of Kennedy J., [1898] 1 Q. B. 396), that, by virtue of s. 176 of the Army Act, 1881, the members of the corps were subject to military law from the time when they fell in on Aug. 1 for the purpose of proceeding to the camp to be trained and exercised with the regulars until on their return home on Aug. 8 they were dismissed; and that the plt. and defts. were therefore subject to military law at the time when the defts. did the acts complained of, which were consequently justified under ss. 41 and 45 of the Army Act, 1881:

Held, also, that the acts of the defts. were justified by virtue of the provisions of s. 158 of the Army Act, 1881.

The words "where an offence under this Act has been committed" in that section mean "where an offence under this Act is alleged to have been committed." MARKS v. FROGLEY

1. — Affidavit—Matters to be stated—R. S. C., 1883, Order XLI., r. 5; Order LII., r. 4.

The copy of the affidavit to be used in support of a motion for attachment, which by Order LII., r. 4, is required to be served with the notice of motion, must contain a statement that the order alleged to have been disobeyed when served was duly indorsed with the memorandum pointing out the consequence of neglecting to obey it, as required by Order XLI., r. 5; and if such statement is omitted the service is insufficient. STOCKTON FOOTBALL CO. v. Copies of the affidavits on which an application for an attachment was made in chambers were not served on the deft. The objection being taken, the judge adjourned the case to give deft. an opportunity of answering them. On the further hearing deft.'s solicitor admitted that deft. could not answer them:—

Held, that, assuming that Order LII., r. 4, of

An appointment before a chief clerk to sign the certificate is a purely formal matter, and need not be attended by either party. The plt. alone attended such an appointment. The certificate was not then signed, but was handed to the plt. for some necessary alteration, and by him passed to the defts. who had the carriage of the proceedings. The defts. made the alteration and returned the certificate to the chief clerk's office. It was then signed and filed without any further appointment being made. The plt., being unaware that the certificate had been filed, allowed the time for moving to vary it to elapse, and now applied for an extension of time:—

Held, that plt. had no right to rely upon another appointment being made, and that no extension of time could be granted. In re INGHAM. LAW'S CHEMICAL MANURE CO. v. INGHAM Stirling J. [1896] W. N. (12) 5

After a writ of attachment had been issued at the instance of clients against a solicitor for his non-payment of a sum of 78*l.* which he had been ordered to pay, the clients, at the request of the solicitor, agreed to suspend proceedings under the writ for fourteen days, upon the solicitor paying 25*l.* on account. This was done, but the solicitor did not make any further payment within the extended time, and he was arrested. Upon a motion by the solicitor for his discharge from custody:—

Held, that, by giving time and accepting part payment, the clients had not waived their right to enforce the writ of attachment. In re FERREDAY

Where the effect of the former was that certain entries debited by the bank to their customer were in respect of cheques forged by one of its servants, that the customer was first informed thereof by the accredited agent of the bank who requested his silence, and that the customer in complying with that request acted honestly and with a view to what he believed to be the bank's interest:—

3. — Account—Closing account—Mortgage to secure amount owing on account current—Power of sale—Banker and customer.

A customer of a bank assigned to the bank a policy of assurance on his life, and the moneys payable thereunder, by way of mortgage for securing the amount from time to time owing by him to the bank in account current. The mortgage provided that the statutory power of sale should be exercisable by the bank if (inter alia) default should be made in payment of the balance owing on the account current for the space of one calendar month after the account current had been closed.

In 1899 the amount owing by the customer was more than the bank was willing to allow, and he was constantly pressed to reduce the amount. On Nov. 9 he wrote to the bank manager: "There was a meeting of creditors yesterday. . . . They agreed to accept all the assets I had. I gave them to understand that I was insured . . . and that you held the policy . . . as security for your account. . . . There was a trustee appointed. . . . Trusting every one will get 20s. in the pound. . . ."—

Held, that the letter of Nov. 9 amounted to a closing of the account. It recognised that the relation of banker and customer was at an end, and the transactions between the parties must cease. The bank were, therefore, justified in realizing their security, and the plt. had no case against them. BERRY v. HALIFAX COMMERCIAL BANKING CO. Kekewich J. [1900] W. N. 262

In order to constitute a person a "customer" of a bank within the meaning of s. 82 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, it is not necessary that he should have an account at the bank.

A rate-collector had been in the habit for several years of receiving cheques for rates and cashing them at a country branch of the debts' bank, where he was known but had no account. By falsely pretending to the plts., who were rate-payers, that a rate had been made and was due, he obtained from them a cheque, drawn to his order upon a London bank, crossed generally, and marked "not negotiable." He indorsed the cheque and handed it in to the debts' branch bank, where it was cashed for him, a portion of the proceeds being applied by the banks according to his request, and the balance being handed to him in cash. This balance he appropriated to his own use. The debts. received payment of the cheque from the bank on which it was drawn before the collector's fraud was discovered. In an action to recover the amount so paid, it was found as a fact that the defts. received the payment in good faith and without negligence:—

Held, that in the circumstances the rate-collector, although he had no account with the defts., was a "customer" of the bank within the meaning of s. 82 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, and (V. Williams L.J. doubting) that the defts. received payment of the cheque for the rate-collector and not for themselves; and that, therefore, the defts. were protected by s. 82, and were not liable.

A cheque drawn to the order of a fictitious or non-existing person may be treated as payable to bearer within the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, s. 7, sub-s. 3, although the drawer believes and intends the cheque to be payable to the order of a real person.

A clerk in the account department of the appellants, by fraudulently representing to them that work had been done on their account by B., induced them to draw cheques payable to the order of B. in payment for the pretended work. There was in fact no such person as B. The cheques when signed by the appellants were sent by them to the account department for postage. The clerk obtained possession of the cheques, indorsed them in B.'s name, and negotiated them with the respondents, who gave value for them in good faith. The cheques were paid to the respondents by the appellants' bankers. The appellants having discovered the fraud brought an action against the respondents to recover the amount of the cheques as money paid under a mistake of fact:—

Held, that the cheques were "issued" within the meaning of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, s. 2; that B. was a "fictitious or non-existing person" within the meaning of s. 7, sub-s. 3, of the Act, although the appellants believed and intended the cheques to be payable to the order of a real person; that the cheques might therefore be treated as payable to bearer, and that the action could not be maintained, the respondents being holders in good faith for value.

and had a branch in Paris. A cheque was drawn on the debt. bank in London in favour of the plts. specially indorsed by the plts. to a firm in London and posted for collection to that firm, but it never reached them. After the posting a forged indorsement was put on the cheque, and it was presented at the debtfs.' bank in Paris by a person, purporting to be the last indorsee, who had no account at the debtfs.' bank. The debtfs. paid the cheque, and sent it to their bank in London, who credited their bank in Paris with the value. The London bank refused to deliver the cheque to the plts. The cheque, when it reached the debtfs., was crossed generally.

In an action for conversion of the cheque :—

Held, that the debtfs., by paying the cheque, and forwarding it to their London bank, and crediting their Paris bank with the value, were guilty of a conversion of the cheque in England, and therefore the case was governed by English law; that the person who obtained payment of the cheque was not a “customer” of the debtfs. within the meaning of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, s. 82; that the debtfs., having paid the cheque on a forged indorsement, were not protected by any of the provisions of the Bills of Exchange Act, but were liable, under s. 24, for the value of the cheque.

The co. carried on business at the old banks with the old staff :—

Held, that the banks had ceased to carry on business, that the co. was not “such banker or bankers” as the three county firms, and that neither the firms nor the co. were entitled to be paid any composition by the Bank of England. PRESCOTT, DIMSDALE, CAVE, TUGWELL & Co. v. BANK OF ENGLAND

Country bankers with whom A. had a current account received from their London agents a sum of money to be placed to the credit of A.'s trust account. A. had no trust account with the bankers, and they accordingly placed it to the credit of his current account and advised him thereof. A. knew it was trust money, but gave no instructions to the bankers and continued to draw on his account as usual. At the time the trust money was credited to his current account A. was overdrawn on securities deposited with the bankers, and the effect of so crediting him was to largely reduce his overdraft temporarily. A. however was in good credit, and the bankers had no intention of benefiting themselves and no suspicion that A. contemplated a breach of trust, and they continued to allow him a further and extended overdraft on further securities deposited with them until his bankruptcy some time afterwards:—

Held, that the bankers were not liable to make good to A.'s cestui que trust the trust money that had been lost under the above circumstances. COLEMAN v. BUCKS AND OXON UNION BANK — Byrne J. [1897] 2 Ch. 243

The Registrar-General of New South Wales opened an account with a bank under a special authority and instruction known to the bank for the daily lodgment of the collections of his department and their weekly transfer by his cheque to the Colonial treasury. By the fraud of a clerk in the Registrar's department less was paid in during each week than was certified for, so that each week's cheque resulted in an overdraft. The bank honoured the overdrafts without calling the customer's attention to the fact:—

Held, that the Colonial Government for whom the account was kept was not liable for the overdrafts. LONDON CHARTERED BANK OF AUSTRALIA v. MACMILLAN — P. C. [1892] A. C. 292

23. — Overdraft—Liability of Promoters of projected Company—Novation.

Held, that there was no agreement to give time to the new firm, or to alter the relation between the parties, and that the retired partner was not released; but quære whether a proviso in the deed of dissolution of 1884 which gave time to make arrangements with creditors prevented A. from being discharged.

25. — Stockbroker—Clients' securities deposited to secure broker's indebtedness—Several accounts—Appropriation of payments—Rights of owner of deposited securities—Banker and customer.

Stockbrokers had two accounts with their bankers—a current account and a loan account. The brokers became defaulters on the Stock Exchange on Jan. 13, and were on Jan. 24 adjudicated bankrupts. At the time of their stoppage there was on the current account a balance of 1362l. 10s. to their credit, and a balance of 7500l. was due from them to the bankers on the loan account. They had deposited with the bankers as security bonds and shares belonging to some of their clients. This deposit was made without the authority of the clients, but the bankers did not know that the deposited securities were not the property of the brokers. The deposit was made (as the C. A. held, differing in this respect from Byrne J.) to secure the general indebtedness of the brokers to the bankers, and not merely their indebtedness on the loan account. After the stoppage of the brokers the bankers realized the deposited securities, the proceeds of which were, together with interest until sale, more than sufficient to cover the balance due on the loan account, and there remained in their hands a sum exceeding the credit balance on the current account:—

Held, that the two accounts must be treated as one, and that it was the duty of the bankers to apply the 1362l. 10s. due from them on the current account in reduction of the 7500l. due to them on the loan account, and to use the deposited securities to satisfy only the difference between those two balances:

Held, therefore, that the sum remaining in the bankers' hands belonged to the owners of the deposited securities.

Two days before the stoppage of the brokers a client had sent them a cheque to pay for some stock which they had purchased for him. This cheque was paid to their current account, and the amount of it formed part of the 1362l. 10s. The purchase was not completed by the brokers:

Held, that the client had no equity as against the owners of the deposited securities to be repaid the amount of his cheque out of the 1362l. 10s.

When a broker or other agent entrusted with the possession and apparent ownership of money pays it away in the ordinary course of business for onerous consideration, a transaction which is fraudulent as between the agent and his employer will bind the latter unless he can shew that the recipient of the money did not act in good faith.

Trustees of bank shares instructed a stockbroker to sell them and deposit the proceeds in certain colonial banks. He sold the shares to another stockbroker, and received in the ordinary course a cheque for the price drawn in his own favour. This cheque he paid into his own bank account, then overdrawn. The bank knew the cheque to be proceeds of a sale of shares, but did not know or inquire in what capacity the broker received it:—

Held, affirming the decision of Ct. of Sess., Thomson, &c. (Dunlop's Trustees) v. Clydesdale Bank, Ltd., (1891) 18 R. 751, that the bank were entitled to retain the proceeds of the cheque as against the debt due to them by the broker.

1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 52), s. 4, sub-s. 1 (b); ss. 43, 44.

A trader, who was liable under a judgment for the costs of an action, purported to sell his business to a co. which he had formed for the purpose in consideration of fully paid-up shares and of the co. undertaking to pay his debts. He was the chairman, managing director, and secretary of the co.; he or his nominee held substantially the whole of the shares in it, and he had the complete control of it, including the power to draw cheques, which he exercised in his own favour. Within three months of this transaction a bankruptcy petition was presented against him, grounded on his non-compliance with a bankruptcy notice in respect of the costs in question, and a receiving order was made upon it. His liabilities exceeded 2000*l.*, with assets nil. Between the presentation of the petition and the making of the order, a resolution was passed for the voluntary winding-up of the co., and a liquidator was appointed :—

Held, that the transfer was fraudulent and an act of bankruptcy; that the title of the trustee to the business related back to the date of the transfer, and overrode the claims of the creditors of the co. in the winding-up; and that the liquidator was bound to hand over to the trustee the assets representing the business at the time of the transfer.

An address at which the creditor cannot be found, but can only be heard of, so that the debtor cannot pay the debt there, is not such an address as is required by the Bankruptcy Act and Rules. A bankruptcy notice stated the address of the creditor who issued it to be “White's Club, St. James', S.W.” The creditor did not reside at the club, and he was in fact out of England during the whole of the seven days limited by the notice for the payment of the debt. There was evidence that, if the debtor had gone to the club, he would have been referred to the creditor's

Sect. 4, sub-s. 1 (h), of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, applies to non-traders as well as to traders.

Judgment creditors having pressed the debtor for payment and threatened to levy execution, he offered them a second mortgage on his freehold estates as security, and with a view thereto his solicitors wrote to the solicitors of the judgment creditors as follows: "As promised we send you herewith statement showing income and expenditure and amount of the mortgages on the estates. We think it well to repeat what we stated to you at our interview that a receiving order will be applied for immediately execution is issued." The security offered was declined, and shortly afterwards the judgment creditors issued execution. The debtor at once presented a bankruptcy petition and obtained a receiving order. The trustee in bankruptcy claimed moneys paid to the debtor's solicitor between the date of the letter and of the receiving order, on the ground that the letter was an act of bankruptcy and that his title related back thereto:—

Held, that the letter did not amount to a notice of suspension or of intention to suspend payment, and therefore was not an act of bankruptcy. TRUSTEE OF LORD HILL v. ROWLANDS

1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 52), s. 4, sub-s. 1 (h); s. 6, sub-s. 1 (b).

Under an agreement made in Jan. 1900, between M., a stockbroker, and T., with a view to T.'s ultimately becoming a member of the Stock Exchange and entering into partnership with M., T. paid 2000*l.* into M.'s banking account subject to a condition that if T. should not, on or before Sept. 29, 1900, become a member of the Stock Exchange, or if, having become a member, he should not be at liberty to enter a partnership within that period by reason of his recommenders withholding their consent, then and in either of those cases T. should have the option of determining the agreement by notice, whereupon the 2000*l.* should be repaid by M.

On June 28 M. was hammered on the Stock Exchange, and on July 3 he told T. in conversation that "he was utterly penniless," that "he could not pay anybody," and that "he had lost everything." Thereupon T., without having given any notice determining the agreement, presented a bankruptcy petition against M., alleging that T. was indebted to him "in the sum of 2000*l.* lent by him to M. pursuant to the agreement," and that the act of bankruptcy was that the debtor gave him "notice" on July 3 of having "suspended payment of his debts":—

Held, that the alleged debt of 2000*l.* was not "a liquidated sum, payable either immediately or at some certain future time," within s. 6, sub-s. 1 (b), of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, and was therefore not sufficient to support the petition:—

Held, also, by Lord Alverstone C.J., that if on July 3 T. had been in fact a "creditor" of M., the statement then made by M. to T. would have been a "notice" of suspension of payment constituting an "act of bankruptcy" within s. 4, sub-s. 1 (h). In re MILLER were then living, and which had a private entrance in one street and a "trade entrance" in another, the husband taking part in the management of the business. In Jan. one Lambert supplied her with goods for the purposes of the business to the value of 174*l.*, for which she gave him bills of exchange. Early in Feb. last she sold the business to a limited co., and on Feb. 11 left Manchester and joined her husband and children at lodgings in London, whither the husband had gone to take up a situation. In April they moved to another residence without leaving any address. The bills were dishonoured, and Lambert obtained judgment upon them against the debtor, an order for substituted service of the writ having been obtained in consequence of the impossibility of discovering her address. In Oct. Lambert presented a bankruptcy petition against her in respect of the judgment debt, the alleged act of bankruptcy being that the debtor was "absenting herself with intent to defeat and delay her creditors," within s. 4, sub-s. 1 (d) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883.

As it was again found impossible to serve the petition upon her, an order was made for substituted service, and on Nov. 15 a receiving order was made against her:—

Held, that the facts were sufficient to shew that the debtor had absented herself within the meaning of s. 4, sub-s. 1 (d), of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883; and as to the first point, that the decision in In re Dagnall, [1896] 2 Q. B. 407, was perfectly right; that the words of s. 1, sub-s. 5, of the Married Women's Property Act, 1882, "carrying on a trade separately from her husband," were not confined to the case of a married woman carrying on trade at the time, in the sense of actually conducting the business, but applied so long as she had not discharged the debts incurred in the business. The difference of language in the Bankruptcy Acts, 1869 and 1883, was sufficient to justify the decision in In re Dagnall. Moreover, the principle was long ago settled by Lord Eldon in Ex parte Bamford (1808-9), 15 Ves. 449, a decision under the Bankruptcy Act of George III. The debtor was therefore subject to the bankruptcy laws. Appeal dismissed. In re WORSLEY C. A. [1900] W. N. 269

P., who had an inalienable pension, had judgment recovered against him. On a judgment summons an order was made for payment by instalments. P. then presented his petition, with the object of evading the judgment, and was adjudicated bankrupt. The judgment creditor was practically the sole creditor, and the assets were very small:—

A creditor obtained by consent a judgment for the amount of his debt. The debtor became bankrupt, and the trustee rejected the creditor's proof. The creditor did not appeal, but after the annulment of the bankruptcy sought to enforce his judgment:—

Held, that the rejection of the proof was an act done by the trustee within the meaning of s. 81 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869: the rejection of the debt was, therefore, valid and final, and the creditor could not enforce his judgment. BRANDON v. MCHENRY — C. A. [1891] 1 Q. B. 538

Where the personal earnings of an undischarged bankrupt are received periodically, and are more than sufficient to provide for his support, the balance may be made the subject of an order under s. 53 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883. A partner in a firm of dental surgeons mortgaged his share in the business. The mortgagees brought an action to realize their mortgage and obtained a receiver; subsequently the mortgagor became bankrupt, but continued to carry on business under the terms of the partnership deed. The trustee claimed that the profits which since the bankruptcy had been paid to the receiver should be paid over to him:—

It also appeared by the report that the bankrupt had been engaged with various persons in transactions involving issues of fact of much difficulty and sums of great magnitude. The registrar directed the prosecution of the bankrupt for the offences mentioned in the report, and adjourned the further hearing of the bankrupt's application :—

Held, that the fact that the registrar had ordered the prosecution of the bankrupt was no reason whatever for transferring the further hearing of the application for discharge to the judge; but the objection that the report dealt with transactions raising issues of fact of much difficulty and involving sums of great magnitude was entitled to weight, and on this ground the order asked for was made, but it was directed that the further hearing should stand adjourned pending the result of the prosecution directed by the registrar. In re HOOLEY

Execution having been issued upon a judgment for 80*l.* and costs, the sheriff on Dec. 31, 1898, levied under a writ of fi. fa. On Jan. 5, 1899, the debtor, under an arrangement with the solicitors of the execution creditors, paid the solicitors a sum of 40*l.* on account, and gave to the sheriff authority to re-enter under the writ of fi. fa. upon default in payment of any of the instalments of the balance at the agreed dates for payment. The sheriff thereupon withdrew. On Jan. 14 a receiving order was made against the debtor on his own petition; at that date the sheriff had not re-entered under the writ of fi. fa.:—

Where under an execution the sheriff sells the goods of the judgment debtor, and subsequently, under s. 11 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, receives from the official receiver notice of bankruptcy proceedings commenced against the debtor since the sale, together with a demand for payment of the proceeds of sale, he is entitled to retain out of the proceeds and pay the landlord of the premises on which the execution was levied any arrears of rent due to him from the debtor, not exceeding the amount of one year's rent, even though he, the sheriff, has not received notice of the landlord's claim until after the sale, and notwithstanding that the sale has deprived the landlord of the lien given him on the goods themselves by s. 1 of 8 Anne, c. 14 (c. 18 in Revised Statutes).

The right of the landlord to be paid out of the proceeds of sale in the hands of the sheriff, where no bankruptcy intervenes—a right established by the practice uniformly adopted under the statute of Anne and recognised by judicial authority long before the present law of bankruptcy—is not affected by s. 11 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890. The expression “the goods of a debtor” in that section does not include the goods of a judgment debtor, which are by the statute of Anne impounded until the landlord is paid; nor are the proceeds of sale of those goods to be handed by the sheriff to the trustee in bankruptcy under that section free from the right of the landlord, sanctioned by long practice, or of the sheriff for his own indemnity.

At the end of the fifteen months a receiving order was made against the debtor on his own petition, and the goods were sold. On the taxation of the costs of the execution, the Bd. of Trade disputed the right of the sheriff to possession money for the full period:—

Held, that the act of bankruptcy created by s. 1 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, consisted of—first, the seizure by the sheriff; and, secondly, his remaining in possession for twenty-one days; and that his subsequent continuing in possession under the same seizure did not constitute a further or continuing act of bankruptcy; that consequently there was no act of bankruptcy under this section available against the debtor; and that the sheriff was entitled under s. 11 to possession money for the full period as costs of the execution.

employed in it, the question arose how the business was to be carried on and the wages paid until it had been decided whether a receiving order should be made or not. Under the practice in bankruptcy there seems to be some doubt whether, under s. 12, empowering the official receiver to appoint a special manager, the official receiver can make the appointment while he is acting only as interim receiver under s. 10: see Vaughan Williams on Bankruptcy, 7th ed. p. 57.

Where, during the pendency of a bankruptcy petition which is ultimately dismissed without any receiving order having been made upon it, the official receiver, on being appointed interim receiver under s. 10 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, appoints, in exercise of his power under s. 12 ([1900] W. N. 12), a special manager of the alleged debtor's business, the special manager is entitled to be reimbursed out of his receipts from the business his expenses, including remuneration, properly incurred by him in carrying it on until the dismissal of the petition.

The fact that the special manager has, under such circumstances, been in possession of and carrying on the business does not entitle the alleged debtor, on the petition being dismissed, to treat him as a wrong-doer or to deprive him of his right to protection as an officer of the Court; for, as the Bankruptcy Court has jurisdiction to entertain a petition against an alleged debtor, an order appointing the official receiver as interim receiver during the pendency of the petition, with the consequent right of appointing a special manager under s. 12, continues valid until it is set aside, and thus imparts validity to everything done under it, even though it may turn out to have been erroneously made—as where, at the hearing of the petition, it appears that the alleged debtor, being a foreigner not subject to the jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court, is not a "debtor" within the meaning of the Act ([1900] 1 Q. B. 541), and, therefore, not subject to the provisions for the appointment of an interim receiver or a special manager.

Per Rigby L.J.: The power of the Bankruptcy Court to appoint the official receiver to be interim receiver under s. 10 of the Act arises immediately upon the presentation of the petition, whatever the result of the petition may be.

The special provisions of rules 170-175 (Bankruptcy Rules, 1886) relating to the appointment of the official receiver as "interim receiver," and providing for the deposit in advance of a sum for his expenses, do not deprive him of his subsequent right to reimbursement out of his receipts of all expenses incurred by him in carrying out the duties of his office.

Those rules apply exclusively to an interim receiver, and not to a special manager at all.

Bankrupts had, prior to their bankruptcy, sold and consigned goods to customers in Spain on the terms that the customers were to have six months' credit from the date of the invoice, and on the expiration of the first three months, but not before, were bound to accept the bankrupts' drafts at three months for the price of the goods. The bankrupts, on making the consignments, obtained advances from bankers upon the following terms, namely, that they should draw for the price of the goods upon their customers in Spain at six months from the date of the invoice, and hand the draft to the bankers, and, when the period of three months from the date of the invoice arrived, they should draw a bill of exchange upon the customer for the price of the goods, and hand the bill to the bankers for them to get it accepted by the customer, and, when the bill was met, the unaccepted draft at six months should be handed back to the bankrupts. The bankrupts, in pursuance of this arrangement, drew and handed to the bankers drafts for the prices of goods sold and consigned to customers in Spain at six months from the date of the invoice, and at the commencement of the bankruptcy these drafts were in the hands of the bankers unaccepted and no notice of the transaction between them and the bankrupts had been given to the customers:—

Held, that the debts owing by the Spanish customers to the bankrupts were at the commencement of the bankruptcy in the order and disposition of the bankrupts, in their trade, by the consent and permission of the true owners under such circumstances that the bankrupts were the reputed owners thereof.

In order to establish that goods were, at the commencement of the bankruptcy, in the possession, order, or disposition of the bankrupt “in his trade or business,” within the meaning of s. 44 (iii.) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, it is not necessary to shew that the goods were such as the bankrupt could pledge or sell in the course of his business: it is enough to shew that they were in his possession, order, or disposition for the purposes of, or purposes connected with, his trade or business.

In an action to recover possession of stands used in the business of a mantle-maker for the purpose of shewing off to advantage the mantles in her shop, it was proved that the stands were in her possession with the consent of the plt., who was the true owner of them; that the mantle-maker subsequently became bankrupt, and that the deft., her trustee in bankruptcy, had thereupon removed them from her shop:—

Sec. 40 (3) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, leaves the law as it was previously. Therefore, where there is no joint partnership estate, a creditor of the partnership is entitled to have his debt paid out of the separate estates of the separate partners on an equality with the separate creditors. *In re BUDGETT. ance, against a late partnership firm of “W. Brothers,” in an action brought against it after its dissolution, for a debt incurred during the partnership. The writ had been served on each of the late partners, J. W. and T. W. A bankruptcy notice in the usual form, and following the judgment, was then addressed to “W. Brothers” and served personally on each of the late partners. The notice not having been complied with, the judgment creditor presented a petition against J. W. alone:—

Held, by the Div. Ct., that the bankruptcy notice was good, having followed the judgment; and that as it had been served on J. W. personally, a receiving order on the petition could properly be made against him.

On appeal by J. W. to the C. A.:—

Held, that under R. S. C., Order XLVIII. a, the action had been properly constituted against “W. Brothers” as a firm, notwithstanding its dissolution, since the cause of action had accrued before the dissolution (Partnership Act, 1890, s. 38); and that, under the same order, the judgment was enforceable against each of the late partners:

Held also, by Lord Alverstone M.R. and Rigby L.J. (Collins L.J. doubting), that under s. 115 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, bankruptcy proceedings on the judgment would lie against the firm notwithstanding its dissolution, and that therefore the bankruptcy notice, though addressed to a then non-existent firm, was sufficient to support a receiving order under rule 262 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1886, against J. W. alone:

But held, by Collins L.J., that even if the bankruptcy notice was technically defective as against J. W., yet under the circumstances the defect was one that had not caused him any “substantial injustice,” and was therefore capable of amendment under s. 143.

Where the act of bankruptcy relied on is failure to comply with a bankruptcy notice, the petition must state the date of the act of bankruptcy.

Held, also, that the defect in not stating the date of the act of bankruptcy was not a ground for setting aside the receiving order, but ought to have been amended on the hearing of the petition, and could be amended by the Court on an appeal from the making of the receiving order. *In re DUNHILL. A second bankruptcy petition was presented in the London Court of Bankruptcy:—

Held, that the judgment, so long as it was not set aside, was conclusive that there was a debt between the judgment debtor and creditor, and that the county court registrar had no jurisdiction to decide that the judgment debt was not a valid debt as between the parties to it. Therefore, all he could do and did was to exercise his discretion to refuse to make a receiving order. Therefore it was not res judicata that there was not a valid debt. *In re VITORIA. Where a creditor, having presented a bankruptcy petition against his debtor based upon a particular debt, such as a judgment debt, consents to its being dismissed upon the terms of the debtor agreeing to pay a fresh debt of increased amount, it is not an abuse of the process of the Court for the creditor, in case of the debtor making default, to present a second petition based upon the new debt, provided he has not used extortion or pressure towards the debtor.

Leave to withdraw a creditor's bankruptcy petition under s. 7, sub-s. 7, of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, should not be given without the Court being first informed of the facts of the case and the proposed terms of withdrawal, so that it may exercise its judgment as to whether the case is a proper one for allowing a withdrawal. In re BEBBO C. Although under ordinary circumstances a creditor proving in a bankruptcy may properly lump together his debts and securities, yet when the debts are distinct in substance, with different rights over as against third persons, or with different securities, the trustee in the bankruptcy may insist that proof shall not be made for a lump sum, and may require the creditor to distinguish and specify the particular debts and the values of the securities for the same respectively.

A bank were the indorsees of four bills of exchange, of which A and C were drawn by one person, and B and D by another person, upon different acceptors, to the order of the same payee, who indorsed them all to the same firm. That firm indorsed them to another firm, who indorsed them to the bank. The first-mentioned firm executed a creditor's deed, which provided for the distribution of their assets as in bankruptcy. The bank proved under the deed for the aggregate amount of the four bills, and, by means of dividends under the deed and payments by the other persons liable upon the bills, they received in respect of the bills B and D more than 20s. in the pound, but they had not yet received payment in full of the other two bills A and C. The whole amount which they had received was less than the total amount due on all the four bills:—

A trading firm became bankrupt in 1847, and a corporation created by statute proved in the bankruptcy, with other creditors. In 1887 the corporation was dissolved by an order of the Court under the Companies Acts. Afterwards it was discovered that the bankrupts had been entitled to certain ry. shares, and the official receiver recovered the value of the shares, and held the proceeds as trustee in the bankruptcy. Another creditor moved to expunge the proof of the dissolved corporation, claiming that the money to which the corporation had been entitled as a creditor, and which was then in the hands of the official receiver as trustee, was divisible among the still existing creditors.

The county court judge made an order expunging the proof.

On appeal by the Att.-Gen. on behalf of the Treasury:—

Held, reversing the order, that on the dissolution of the corporation the proceeds of the shares in the hands of the official receiver as trustee in the bankruptcy had passed to the Crown as bona vacantia, and the Crown was entitled to the amount. *In re HIGGINSON & DEAN. Damages awarded to a petitioner in the Divorce Court against a co-respondent, and ordered to be paid into court, although they will not support a bankruptcy petition against the co-respondent, are nevertheless a debt provable in his bankruptcy. The payment of such damages therefore cannot, if his bankruptcy supervenes, be enforced against him by a judgment summons under s. 5 of the Debtors Act, 1869.

By a contract made in Feb., 1898, H. agreed to sell to a co. certain properties; and by the same contract H. agreed to subscribe and pay for in cash so much of the share capital of the co. as should not be taken up by the public. In the events which happened H. became bound under the contract to take up and pay for certain preference shares and 25,000 ordinary shares of 1l. each in the co. In June, 1898, H. became bankrupt, and in the July following his trustee in bankruptcy disclaimed the contract. Soon afterwards the co. went into liquidation, and the liquidator lodged a proof against H.'s estate for damages for breach of the contract. H.'s estate was estimated to realise not more than 4s. in the pound. The liabilities of the co. were about 16,000l., whilst its assets comprised, practically, about 4000l. at a bank and the claim against H.'s estate. The liquidator made a call of 1l. per share on the ordinary shares of the co., and claimed that the proof against H.'s estate should stand at 25,000l., on the ground that the measure of damages for the injury caused to the co. by the disclaimer was the loss of the call of 1l. per share on the 25,000 shares which H. was bound to take up. The trustee admitted the proof for 10,500l. only, that being the difference between the then estimated assets and liabilities of the co. —

Held, that, as the disclaimer had put an end to the contract, and the claim of the co. could only be for damages for breach of the contract, the trustee had assessed the damages on the right principle, and that the proof must stand at 10,500l. *In re HOOLEY. After a receiving order, a debtor submitted to the first meeting of his creditors a scheme to pay a composition of 7s. 6d. in the pound to those creditors whose debts he admitted. At the first meeting proofs were lodged for 60,000l., of which proofs for 15,000l. were admitted, but the debtor wholly disputed the remaining 45,000l. The admitted creditors accepted the scheme subject to the sanction of the Court. The official receiver had no assets and no means of testing the validity of the disputed proofs, which depended on complicated questions of fact. The debtor then applied to the Court that he might be at liberty in the name of the official receiver (indemnifying him) to reject the disputed proofs or to take proceedings to expunge or reduce them. The official receiver objected to his name being used; —

Held, the proper course was for the debtor to serve notice of motion on the creditors in question asking that their proofs might be expunged from the file of the proceedings. In re CALVERT - WRIGHT J. [1899] W. N. 34 (3)

II. to the Act, is that when a debt is by contract payable at a future date, with interest in the meantime, and the debtor becomes bankrupt before the time of payment has arrived, the creditor may prove for interest accruing after the date of the receiving order. In such a case the proper course is to prove for the principal sum as a present debt: then under rule 21 to deduct a rebate of interest at 5 per cent. from the dividends upon it; and then to value the liability to pay interest and prove for that value the dividend on which is to be paid without any rebate. When the rate of interest contracted for is 5 per cent. the proper course is simply to prove for the principal sum as a present debt, without any rebate. of fixed Sum out of Profits—"Share of Profits"—"Loan"—Partnership Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 39), s. 2, sub-s. 3 (d); ss. 3, 10.

A contract that a person shall receive a fixed sum "out of the profits" of a business is equivalent to a contract that he shall receive "a share of the profits" within the meaning of sub-s. 3 (d) of s. 2 of the Partnership Act, 1890.

Under a written contract A. lent B. 500l. for his business. A. was to have the sole control and management of the business, and an option was given him (which was not exercised) of becoming a partner with B. in the business within a certain time. For the use of his money A. was to be paid the weekly sum of 3l., afterwards reduced to 2l., "out of the profits" of the business. B. was to draw like weekly sums. B. having become bankrupt, A. claimed to prove for the money he had advanced:—

Held, that, under the circumstances, A. was not a partner; but that he was in the position of a person who was receiving a "share of the profits" of the business within the meaning of the Partnership Act, 1890, s. 2, sub-s. 3 (d), and therefore could not prove until all the other creditors had been satisfied. *In re YOUNG. Held, that though the contract for sale was protected by s. 49 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, the assignment and the payment of the purchase-money, in pursuance of the contract but after notice of the act of bankruptcy, would not have been protected, and that the purchaser was therefore not bound to complete, and was entitled to recover the deposit. *POWELL v. In May, 1892, A. committed an act of bankruptcy, and a receiving order was made against him in Aug. 1892. On June 24, 1892, A. by deed assigned the same moneys under the same contract to the co. to secure the payment of 74l, which sum in fact included the previous 30l. Notice of this deed was at once given to the War Office by the co., who were not aware of the act of bankruptcy. In Nov., 1893, the trustee in bankruptcy rejected the claim of the co. to be secured creditors, and informed them that he should shortly receive from the War Office the money due under the contract. The co. took no step to assert their claim until Dec., 1895:—

BANKRUPTCY (Protected Transaction)—contd.

The principles which, under the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, ss. 35, 36, govern the annulment of an adjudication in bankruptcy are also applicable to the annulment of a receiving order. A receiving order was annulled on payment into court by the debtor of a sum sufficient to pay in full those of his creditors for the payment of whose debts he could not produce receipts. After six years, no proof or claim having been made in the meantime by the creditors in question, the debtor applied that the sum in court might be paid out to him:—

Held, that the Statute of Limitations did not apply, and that he was not entitled to the order. But held, that on the Court being satisfied that there was practically no possibility of the creditors or their personal representatives being found, and on reasonable security being given by the debtor for the repayment into Court of the money if at any time the creditors or their personal representatives should appear and make a claim, the sum in Court might be paid out to the debtor. *In re DENNIS. The Court of Bankruptcy has no jurisdiction to make a receiving order against a foreigner resident out of the jurisdiction who, without himself coming within the jurisdiction, has carried on business, contracted debts, and has assets there, and has executed out of the jurisdiction an assignment of his property for the benefit of his creditors generally, or has given notice of suspension of payment to creditors within the jurisdiction.
